The health concept for those who plan ahead.

Strengthening the “human” success factor with corporate health services is becoming increasingly important in companies in the long term. The changes in the working world 4.0, new forms of organisation, processes that become faster – all this also has an impact on the health of employees.

With the right concept, corporate health is much more than an employer benefit. It not only ensures healthier staff, but also increases satisfaction, loyalty and motivation, while at the same time making the employer more attractive. In this way, health benefits become a modern personnel policy instrument with real added value for the entire company.

As an innovation leader in corporate health insurance, Hallesche is also taking the decisive step here: With FEELfree, the modern health concept for companies.
